French Wreak Vengeance on Italians in Lyons.

Lyons, June 26 .- The streets of this city were yesterday thronged with crowds of excited people. A large number of stores are closed. Serious rioting has already occurred and more trouble is anticipated. Were it anarchists. not for the presence of the overwhelming force of troops stationed in and about the city there is little doubt that the mob would attack the palace of justice and wreak vengeance upon the murderer. Mourning emblems are worn by nearly every man, woman and child in the city, and no dwelling seems too poor to display the emblem of grief from its windows and about its doors.

The majority of the inhabitants are wearing small mourning badges of immortelles in their buttonholes, in addition to crepe around their arms. All the flags are draped with crepe, and a countless number of portraits and engravings of the late president surrounded by crepe are to be seen displayed in the windows everywhere.

Last evening the remains of the dead president were removed from the spartments in the prefecture and the procession through the streets was reverently witnessed. No sooner had the cortege gone by, however, before a great change appeared in the crowd. The people who had heretofore stood reverently and mute before the nation's martyr, now gave vent to their pent-up excitement and rage. Everywhere could be heard eries of "Long live Carnot and death to his murderer!"

The sudden transition in the feelings of the crowd boded ill for the resident Italians, and when some of the more hot headed men in the crowd proposed that an attack be made upon the Italian quarter, the proposition was received with wild shouts of approval. In almost less time than it takes to tell it an enor-mous mob, at the head of which was carried a French flag, was en route to that part of the city given over to the Italians, and before the police could intervene to prevent the trouble the mob had attacked all the shops belonging to the foreigners and sacked them. The proprietors and their families were forced to flee for their lives. In the meantime another large band marched through other streets by threats compelled every Italian who kept a cafe, to close his place of business.

As the night advanced the rioting in the city became more widespread, and at one time it looked as though the mobs would take full possession of the town. In the Guillotierie quarters the disturbances were particularly violent. Thousands of men and boys paraded the streets, and attacked and sacked every Italian store they came across. Much of the loot ob-tained by the rioters consisted of liquors, part of which was drank by the rioters, while what was not so disposed of was either poured into the streets and set on fire or burned in the casks and barrels which were rolled into the middle of the thoroughfares. Many acts of violence were committed and threats of death to Italians were freely bandied about. A number of arrests were made when the trouble was at its height, but the prisoners were subsequently liberated by the gen d'armes, who were vociferously applauded by the Many of the ringleaders, who had fallen into the hands of the police, only later to be set at liberty, were carried in triumph to similar riotous scenes being enacted in other

SANTO'S PAST LIFE.

He Had Escaped From Prison, Where

He Was Serving a Sentence. MILAN, June 26. - An interview was had with the sister of Santo, the assassin of President Carnot. She said that from the time he was 19 years old her brother had been a frequent attendant at anarchist gatherings. He was especially devoted in his attendance at meetings presided over by the prominent anarchist advocate, Gori, with whom Santo was infatuated. Unhappily, the sister added, her brother's occupation as a baker had left him ample leisure for this pur-The police learned of Santo's anarchistic tendencies, and on one occasion searched his house, securing a number of incendiary pamphlets. His mother and sister, fearful of what might become of him, tried to get him to abandon anarchism and devote himself to his trade and harmless pleasures. The warning of the police and the pleadings of his relatives, however, had no effect. Santo appeared to be infatuated with the idea of spreading anarchist propaganda and the police kept a watchful eve upon him. Three mouths later he was detected, in company with other anarchists, in distributing anarchist literature among the soldiers. For this offense he was arrested, tried, convicted and sennced to five years' imprisonment. He was a youth of resource, however, and after serving part of his sentence, he managed to effect his escape from the prison in which he was confined and fled to Luganoth Lugano. After this the family heard nothing of him until six months ago, when a letter was received from him announcing that he was still seeking work. His sister said that when she heard the name of Santo mentioned in connection with the murder of President Carnot she felt certain that it was that of her brother.

Santo has been employed four years said he knew little of Santo outside of the work he did, but he scouted the idea that Santo was the author of Anarchist pamphlets. He was too ignorant and uneducated to write anything. The man admitted that he knew Santo was infatuated with the Anarchista.

NOT AN ITALIAN.

Santo Comes From the Southernmost Canton of Switzerland.

PARIS, June 26 .- Santo, the murderer, has boldly asserted that he is an anarchist, and therefore upon the the anarchists are the people pouring their wrath. Further than asserting that he is an anarchist the prisoner has not apparently made any statement, but it is reported that the police are convinced that the assassination of President Carnot is the result of a plan in which some other of the people are concerned. Indeed, there no longer seems to be much doubt that the president's assassination was the result of an anarchistic conspiracy to avenge the deaths of Vaillant and Emil Henri, the two recently executed

A dispatch from Rome says that the investigation which the Italian authorities have made into the identity of Santo, the assassin, shows that he is not an Italian, but that he comes from Ticino, the southermost canton of Switzerland, where the large majority of the inhabitants speak

Another dispatch from Rome says Santo is the son of Marie Broglio and Antoine Caesavio. He joined the Anarchists at an early age. In January, 1892, he tried, with two fellow Anarchists, to start a newspaper, but was unable to raise the funds necessary to float it. The police watched him until the end of 1893, when he went to Switzerland.

□ As a result of police inquiry the following facts in regard to the assassin's movements previous to the crime have been learned: Santo missed the train running direct to Lyons from Cette on Saturday and had to go to Mont Pellier and thence to Vienna. From there he was unable to pay his fare on the train to Lyons, having only sixty centimes in his pocket, and was obliged to walk thirty miles. He arrived at Lyons the same afternoon.

Examining Magistrate Benoist yesterday ordered the assassin to be brought before him, and questioned him regarding the crime. The pris-oner, however, obstinately refused to make any statement further than announcing that he would explain his modive to the jury when the proper time arrived.

TAKEN TO PARIS.

Romains of the Murdered President Removed to the Nation's Capital.

Lyons, June 26 .- The body of M. Carnot was taken from the prefecture last evening and placed on the train that will convey it to Paris. After prayers for the dead had been offered the casket containing the remains was carried out and placed on a gun carriage. While this was being done, salutes of artilery were fired, trumpets were sounded and drums were beaten. All civil and military honor was shown the dead. The square in front of the prefecture was densly thronged, as were all the streets leading to the railway station. Troops and gen d'armes kept the route clear.

The procession that followed the body was a very lengthy one. It included all the civil and military authorities of Lyons and a large number of delegates from different cities and towns. As the sad cortege passed slowly along the streets were remarkably quiet. Almost the only sound that could be heard were the tramping of the horses and of the gun carriages. Every man along the line of march removed his hat as the body passed him and there were silent prayers offered for the repose of M. Carnot's soul.

Upon the arrival of the cortege at railway station the casket was tenderly lifted from the gun carriage and conveyed into a saloon carriage. The remains were attended by the officers of M. Carnot's military household, who had accompanied him to Lyons. In another carriage were Mme, Carnot and her three sons. A large crowd was assembled about the station, and as the train started on its journey for Paris many signs of the deepest emotion were displayed.

IN THE CHAMBER.

Formal Announcement of the President's Assassination Made.

Paris, June 26 .- The chamber of deputies was thronged to the utmost and there was great excitement when Prime Minister Casimer-Perier entered. Every person present arose and remained standing while the president of the chamber of deputies read M. Dapuy's letter making the formal announcement of the death of President Carnot and adding that the whole of France was stupefied by the abominable crime. M. Dupuy also said: "From all parts expressions of emotion and sorrow are arriving. France weeps at the loss of the loyal servant and upright citizen who carried, with onor and fidelity, the national flag, and who awakened in Europe feelings which show how great is the ordeal through which we are now passing. The republic will ever remember President Carnot. All our sympathies are with the family, which mourn his loss and which, like him, is worthy of France. The whole country joins in the indignation felt at the

M. Casimer-Perier, after he had finished reading the premier's letter, said: "The chamber of deputies and France associate themselves with these words. Let us bow respectfully before the tomb which closes over a life of devotion to the fatherland and to the republic."

The president of the chamber of deputies then expressed condolence with the family, concluding with: "France remains brave and strong even in the day of national mourning The chamber of deputies then adthe president's grandfather.

It is said that M. Carnot shrank from going to Lyons. He was long in deciding to make the journey on account of his recent ill-health. When, however, his friends began to talk of the Lyons anarchists avenging Vail-lant's death the president thought he was in honor bound to go.

CLEVELAND ON FINANCE.

The President Talks on the Govern ment's Monetary Situation.

WASHINGTON, June 26 .- The president speaking of the financial situation, said yesterday:

"The offer of certain of the New York banks to replace from their vaults the gold withdrawn from the government treasury for shipment abroad is certainly thoughtful and patriotic. It not only tends to maintain the treasury's gold reserve in good condition, but adds to the stock of popular confidence, which is at all times important.

"The elements which make up our actual situation do not justify any apprehension and the administration still adheres to its pledge and determination to protect our national credit at all hazards and to keep the quality of our money equal to the best, so far as the limits of executive power permits. Of course, croaking and the spread of disquieting tales are calculated to alarm in the stringent financial condition. I assume, however, that there is too much partiotism among our people and too much familiarity with our resources and capabilities to permit our re-served force and financial vigor to be

"When the last government bonds were issued to replenish our stock of gold it was nearly as low as now. While outside of our gold we had as available money to pay ordinary expenses of the government only about $19.000,000, we have now besides our gold, and in money applicable to government expenses more than $53,000,-000. I understand it is charged in certain quarters that the payment of matured obligations is postponed to the amount of $50,000,000 or $75,000,-000. This is not true. We are paying as we go in the usual way.

Last year, up to June, the balance against us arising from the exports and imports of merchandise, excluding gold and silver, was $64,552,040. The balance in our favor for the same period this year was $62,960,562, representing a change in our favor of $127,512,608. These conditions, taken in consideration with the willingness of our banks to help the treasury during any temporary or unusual drain of gold, ought to satisfy the most conservative of our safety. It must not be forgotten as another favorable feature in the situation, that we are no longer purchasing silver or issuing gold obligations therefor."

The Flendish Murderers of the Meeks Family Captured in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 26 .- William H. Taylor, a banker from Browning, Mo., and his brother, George Taylor, a farmer, who was charged with having murdered the Meeks family near Browning, Mo., and for whose arrests rewards aggregating $8,000 have been offered, are registered at Gleason's hotel in this city. They are nominally under arrest, being in charge of Hon. Jerry South, exmember of the state legislature, who arrested the men at Buffalo City, Saturday and brought them to this city. The men admit their identity, but claim to be innocent of the atrocious crime with which they are charged.

Wichita, Kan., June 26 .- At 7:30 last evening a terrible tornado from the southwest struck the village of Keighley, Butler county, and nearly wiped the little town out of existence. All the telegraph wires are down and the information was brought to Leon by a courier, who rode over on a swift

The details are meagre, but it is known that Ed Thurman was crushed to death in a stable and many were pinned under falling houses, receiving serious injuries. It is thought that many were killed, as the tornado swept on its course as far east as the people could see it. Two general stores, the largest buildings in the village, were crushed like eggshells.

A freight train was standing on the Frisco track at the time and six cars were lifted up and turned up side down. The wreck is standing on the track, piled up thirty feet high, and trains cannot pass.

HAIL, LIGHTNING AND RAIN.

Terrific Storm at Hardin, Mo., and Vicinity-Much Damage Done.

HARDIN, Mo., June 26 .- Severe rain and wind storms have occurred in this vicinity since Sunday afteroon, the most severe, however, occurring yesterday afternoon when the rain poured down in torrents for three or four hours, accompanied by hail and wind. Much damage has been done to the wheat, many fields being laid flat with with the ground. Some corn fields were infected with chinch bugs and the rain will drown them out.

While the storm was on a young son of Dr. McGrew, about 9, stepped out on the porch and reached his arm out for a hallstone, when a falling stone struck it, breaking the arm just above the elbow. The Wabash passenger train had all of the north panes of the coaches knocked out by the hail between here and Norborne. The hail was the largest ever known to have fallen here. Some stones weighed after the storm had ceased balanced one-half and three-quarter pounds.

HE TOOK PRECAUTIONS.

Low a Supposed Case of Scarlatina Was uarded by a Parent.

"Well, dear, what did the doctor say?" "He thinks it is scarlatina, James."
"Ah, I feared something of the sort!" "But he could not be certain until tomorrow. I have just given the child a hot bath and put him to bed." "Now, listen, my dear. We must take time by the forelock and prevent the fever spreading. It is a very serious thing in the case of adults, and, as you know, I have never had it. Perfect isolation is the great thing and unlimited disinfectants. Take up the carpet in Tommy's bedroom at once, take down the curtains and pictures and remove everything that you can to the back yard; also take up the stair carpets. As he has been sitting in the breakfast room all the morning, we will lock the door until I can fumigate it." "But, James, dear"-

"Don't stop arguing, Lucy. We shall be losing valuable time. I'll run round to the chemist's for a few things. In the meantime just see that there is plenty of hot water for disinfecting baths and fasten sheets over all the doors. And whatever you do, Lucy, keep cool. Don't be frightened or nervous. I shan't be long. By Jove, I've got a nasty sore throat my-self! I hope it's nothing."

"Disinfectants, sir?"

"Yes. There's a serious outbreak of fe-ver at our house. What have you got?" "Hosking's patent purifier"— Send a dozen bottles to go on with." "Dabb's fluid"-

"Same quantity." "Wobster's ozone disseminator"-"Six will be enough." "Jasper's disinfectant, an excellent arti-

"I'll have a dozen of that." "Carbolic acid, sir!"

"Well, yes. Say a gallon, and a pound of permanganate of potash crystals."
"Anything else, sir?"
"A quarter of a hundredweight of chloride of lime, three or four pounds of rock sulphur, and put in anything else you can think of that I have forgtten. How soon can you send those?" Immediately, sir. I see my boy has just come back with the cart.

"Now, my dear, the disinfectants are here. Is everything ready?"

"I think so, James.
The master of the house then took off his coat, turned up his shirt sleeves and set about his task. First of all he sent his wife to Tommy's room and peremptorily ordered her to remain there for six weeks. He then emptied a bottle of Jasper's disinfectant into a bucketful of water, and with a garden syringe proceeded to play upon the sheets fastened over the doors until the landing was converted into a running brook and the stairs into a small cascade. The drawing room underneath resembled the dropping well at Knaresborough, and the ceiling of the hall was covered with liquid brown beads,

He next powdered every room with Wobster's ozone disseminator until it looked like the interior of a flourmill. It was almost impossible to move without putting your foot in a bowl of Dabb's fluid or knocking over a dish of Hosking's patent

Then he transferred the contents of the kitchen fire to a large metal dish, which he deposited on an iron support in the little breakfast room and covered with four pounds of crushed rock sulphur, carefully sealing windows and doors and closing the register of the fireplace. After that he poured half a gallon of carbolic acid down the sink and covered the scullery floor an inch deep with chloride of lime. By this time the atmosphere of the place had become a little oppressive, and it is perhaps not surprising that both he and as another bad symptom, but he was satisfled that he had done all he could. He then proceeded to take a hot bath, in which he had dissolved half an ounce of the potash crystals, and went to bed, having thoroughly drilled the servant in the precautions she should take and or-the servant felt sick. This he interpreted dered her to take a similar bath herself. He hardly slept at all that night. First he had a very sore throat, then pains in the back. He was feverish, too-decidedly feverish; felt sick and had a quick pulse. When he crept down stairs in the early morning, his legs shook beneath him, and he looked-no, he did not look pale. He would have done so, though, had not the strong solution of potash crys tals dyed him a rich brown. When the maid, a perfect "nut brown maid," saw that her master was the same color as her self, she grinned from ear to ear.

"What are you laughing at, you boo-?" he exclaimed in anger. "Isn't it by?" he exclaimed in anger. "Isn't it better to be copper colored than fever stricken? There's the doctor at the door. Let him go up stairs."

When the medical man came down and met the anxious father at the foot of the stairs, he could hardly keep a serious coun-

"Well, doctor, how is the patient?" "Quite well, I'm glad to say." "Quite well!" "Yes. It was only a bilious attack, after all-just a little overeating or something of that sort." Tommy's father was for the moment speechless. He could not make up his mind whether he ought to thrash his offspring or the doctor. It wasn't exactly that he was sorry it was not scarlatina, after all, but he wanted to kick somebody. He didn't care particularly who it was and would have kicked himself if he had been able. "Doctor," he at length gasped out, "I've been fooled! I don't say you've done it, but I feel I've been fooled. Five hundred dollars won't cover the damage and expense of this business. But I should like you to distinctly understand one thing-I'm not at all a nervous man. Don't get that idea into your head. But I believe in taking proper precaution-in always being "I quite understand," said the doctor,

"and it is very laudable, but don't you think that it is sometimes possible to have just a little too much of a good thing?"-

When Behanzin sent his expedition into Porto Novo in 1892, his fierce amazons pillaged and devastated a number of villages, carrying hundreds of prisoners to Abomey. The French immediately sent messengers to the king demanding the instant release of the prisoners. The reply was conveyed to Porto Novo by a Dahoman warrior and consisted of a large basket containing the heads of the French messengers.

Then the French marched on Abomey. King Behanzin was outmanuvered, and he retreated, burning and destroying as he went. He issued an order for all his subjects to follow him. The French entered Abomey without opposition. Behanzin was abandoned by almost all of his people, and his brother was made king by General Dodds. Behanzin then sent a message to the French general, offering to surrender on condition that he should not be delivered into the hands of the new king, saying that he would prefer death to humiliation. The Frenchman assured him of personal safety and told him he wov 1 be exiled and provided
